NATASHA CASE

BARRISTER

Natasha Case specialises in commercial and public law, appearing primarily in trials and appeals in the Supreme Court and Federal Court. She is recognised as a Leading Junior in the Legal 500 Asia Pacific Guide: Commercial Disputes.

Natasha's commercial practice includes corporations and consumer law, contract, equity and property.

Natasha's public law practice includes constitutional law, judicial review and appeals on questions of law, civil penalty proceedings, tax, professional discipline, intentional torts and native title and land rights.

Natasha appears for regulators and persons of interest in public and private commissions of inquiry and compulsory examinations.

Natasha is an active member of the NSW Bar Association. She is an instructor in NSW Bar Practice Course and was a member of the First Nations Committee for 8 years, when she administered the Association's First Nations Mentoring Program for law students and solicitors.

Prior to being called to the bar, Natasha practised as a solicitor as principal of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre (now the Justice and Equity Centre), in-house counsel for the NSW Information Commissioner, as a solicitor at the Australian Human Rights Commission, in a private litigation practice in Sydney and at the Pilbara Native Title Service.
